

CLAIMS

What I claim is:

1. A system for promoting abstract communication between members of small groups based on the psychological characteristics of colors. Presented as a colorful board made of retractable magnetic material and illustrations for specific use, together with pieces to adhere to it, that with the intervention of an agent will complete the process of communication.
2. A method as defined in claim 1 that will allow the emission of messages with inverted cones colored in green, yellow and red which are attributed to each member of the group of persons and the addition of indicative agents also green, yellow and red, producing a communication call of psycho affective connotation with characteristics determined by their combination.
3. A didactic tool as described in claim 2 that will introduce a new way of communicating with colors within families, work teams, sport teams or any type of small group with a common goal and awareness of the emotional state of their members in order to achieve personal growth and stronger bonds.